Secretary General's Message

Distinguished Delegates,

It is with profound pride and great optimism that I welcome you to the Unique Bureaucrats Model United Nations Conference, Jaipur 2026—a forum designed not merely to simulate diplomacy, but to shape the diplomats, policymakers, and international leaders of tomorrow.

As you gather in the culturally rich and historically resonant city of Jaipur, you stand at the crossroads of ambition and opportunity. The agenda before the United Nations General Assembly—Reforming the United Nations Security Council: Expansion or Efficiency?—is not an academic exercise. It is one of the most consequential questions confronting global governance in the 21st century, directly aligned with Sustainable Development Goal 16: Peace, Justice, and Strong Institutions. Your deliberations mirror the very debates that echo through the halls of the United Nations Headquarters in New York.

At Unique Bureaucrats MUN, we believe that Model United Nations is a launchpad, not a pastime. This conference is curated to cultivate skills that are indispensable in global careers—policy analysis, strategic negotiation, multilateral consensus-building, public diplomacy, and ethical leadership. Every moderated caucus, every draft resolution, and every diplomatic exchange is an investment in your professional future.

Participation in this conference opens pathways far beyond the committee room. The competencies you refine here are the same sought by United Nations agencies, international organizations, global think tanks, diplomatic services, and multinational institutions. Many of today's UN officials, ambassadors, and international civil servants began their journeys exactly where you are now—questioning global systems, proposing reforms, and daring to lead.

As Secretary General, I urge you to engage boldly, think critically, and negotiate with integrity. Let your voice reflect not only national interest, but global responsibility. The future of international cooperation depends on leaders who are prepared, principled, and proactive—and that future begins here.

With best wishes for an inspiring conference,
Abhishek Khatri
Secretary General (Unique Bureaucrats)

Our Vision

In an era of rapidly evolving national and international geopolitics, it is no longer enough for citizens to be mere spectators — they must be informed participants in shaping global discourse.

Government decisions — whether economic, strategic, or diplomatic — are increasingly influenced by developments within global platforms such as the United Nations, G20, BRICS, and other international summits. For democracy to thrive in its truest spirit, citizens must not only understand what decisions are made, but also why they are taken — grounded in the context of global diplomacy and international relations.

Without this awareness, societies risk falling prey to misinformation, half-truths, and politically motivated narratives. To safeguard democratic values and build a globally aware citizenry, it is essential to educate, inform, and engage people with the realities of international decision-making.

At Unique Bureaucrats, we strive to bridge the gap between global forums and local communities by translating complex debates, negotiations, and diplomatic challenges into accessible, engaging, and educational experiences.

We envision a world where citizens are:

- Well-informed about international events and their domestic impact.
- Empowered to evaluate government decisions with clarity and understanding.
- Protected from manipulation through awareness and critical thinking.

Why it Matters ?

1.4

• For Governments & Institutions:

An aware and informed public enhances democratic legitimacy, strengthens policy credibility, and builds trust in governance at both national and global levels.

• For Citizens:

Knowledge becomes empowerment — the ability to evaluate, question, and contribute meaningfully to the decisions that shape society and the world.

• For Youth & Future Leaders:

A transformative platform to practise global leadership, develop diplomatic acumen, and engage in real-world policy simulation within a structured, impactful environment.

The Agenda

Agenda: Reforming the United Nations Security Council Expansion or Efficiency?

Historical Background of the UNSC

The United Nations Security Council (UNSC) was established in 1945 in the aftermath of the Second World War with the primary responsibility of maintaining international peace and security. Its structure reflects the geopolitical realities of that period, comprising five permanent members—China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom, and the United States—endowed with veto power, and ten non-permanent members elected for two-year terms. This arrangement was designed to ensure collective security through cooperation among the major powers of the time. While the UNSC has played a critical role in conflict resolution, peacekeeping, and sanctions regimes, its foundational framework has remained largely unchanged despite significant shifts in global power dynamics.

Need for Reform: Global Perspectives

Over the decades, the international community has increasingly questioned the representativeness and legitimacy of the Security Council. Many regions, particularly Africa, Latin America, and parts of Asia, remain underrepresented in permanent decision-making structures despite their growing political and economic influence. Developing nations argue that the current composition undermines the democratic ethos of the United Nations and limits the Council's credibility. Conversely, some Member States emphasize stability and caution against reforms that could weaken the Council's authority or operational coherence. These divergent global perspectives underscore the complexity of achieving consensus on reform while balancing equity, legitimacy, and effectiveness.

Expansion vs. Efficiency: Key Arguments

The debate on UNSC reform often centres on two primary approaches. Advocates of expansion argue that increasing permanent and/or non-permanent membership would make the Council more representative of contemporary global realities, enhance regional inclusivity, and strengthen the legitimacy of its decisions. Proposals include adding new permanent members, introducing long-term elected seats, or increasing representation for developing regions.

On the other hand, proponents of efficiency caution that expansion may lead to slower decision-making, reduced consensus, and institutional gridlock.

They argue that reforms should instead focus on improving working methods, increasing transparency, limiting the use of the veto, and enhancing cooperation with the General Assembly. This school of thought prioritizes timely action and operational effectiveness over structural enlargement.

Contemporary Challenges in Global Governance

The Security Council today confronts complex and evolving challenges, including protracted conflicts, terrorism, cyber threats, climate-related security risks, humanitarian crises, and geopolitical rivalries among major powers. Increasing use of the veto, selective enforcement of resolutions, and accusations of politicization have further strained the Council's credibility. In an era marked by multipolarity and interdependence, the UNSC must adapt to ensure relevance, accountability, and responsiveness.

Through this agenda, delegates are tasked with proposing balanced and pragmatic reforms that address these challenges while strengthening multilateral cooperation and advancing the principles of peace, justice, and strong institutions embodied in SDG 16.

Recent Developments Related to the Agenda

1. Renewed Push for Structural Reform

In 2025, the UN Secretary-General renewed calls for Security Council reform, emphasizing expansion to reflect current geopolitical realities and address the underrepresentation of regions such as Africa. Parallel discussions in the General Assembly have reinforced the urgency of adapting the Council to modern global challenges.

2. General Assembly Demands Veto Overhaul

Growing frustration over repeated deadlocks—particularly on conflicts such as Ukraine and Gaza—has led many Member States to demand restraint and reform of the veto mechanism, arguing that unchecked veto use undermines accountability and effectiveness.

3. Global South & Regional Perspectives

Countries and regional blocs continue to advance distinct reform visions. India supports equitable regional representation, Africa seeks permanent seats, and several Asian and European states advocate for more inclusive global governance—highlighting diverse priorities within the reform debate.

4. Incremental Reform Pathways

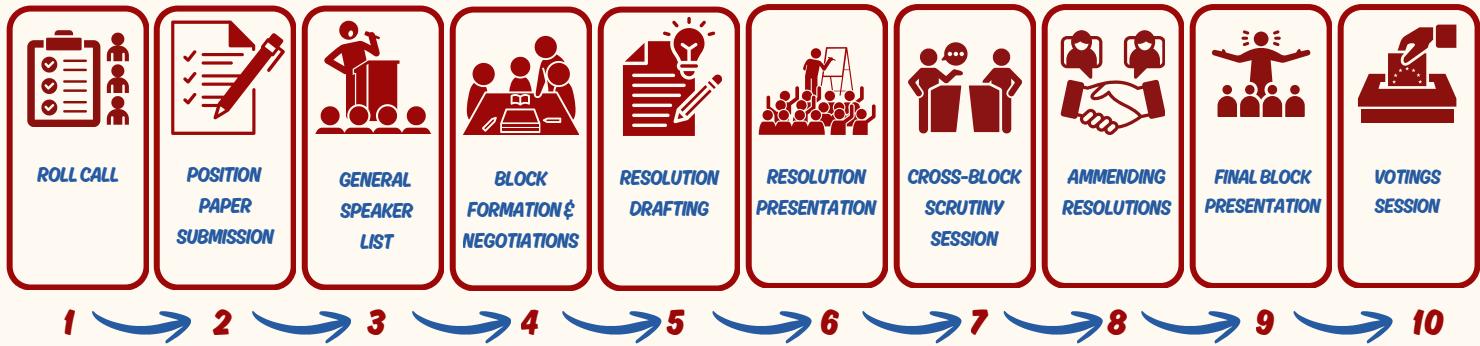

Given the difficulty of amending the UN Charter, focus has shifted toward procedural and functional reforms, including improved working methods and a stronger General Assembly role when the Council is blocked.

5. Elections & Representation

Upcoming elections in June 2026 for non-permanent Security Council seats sustain debates on legitimacy and inclusivity, increasing visibility for underrepresented states despite the absence of veto power.

3 THE COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

The committee proceedings at Unique Bureaucrats MUN follow a structured and sequential debate flow designed to mirror authentic United Nations deliberations. Each stage plays a critical role in ensuring orderly discussion, meaningful negotiation, and effective decision-making.

1. Roll Call

The session formally begins with Roll Call, during which delegations are marked present or absent and voting. This establishes quorum and confirms the committee's readiness to proceed with formal debate.

2. Position Paper Submission

Delegates submit their position papers outlining national policies, priorities, and perspectives on the agenda. These documents demonstrate research depth, policy understanding, and preparedness, and serve as a foundation for substantive debate.

3. General Speakers' List (GSL)

The General Speakers' List sets the tone of the committee. Delegates deliver formal opening statements, articulate national stances, and introduce key concerns and objectives. The GSL remains open throughout debate unless formally closed.

4. Bloc Formation & Negotiations

Delegates engage in informal discussions to identify shared interests and form blocs. This stage emphasizes coalition-building, diplomatic engagement, and alignment of policy objectives across delegations.

5. Resolution Drafting

Working groups translate negotiations into written form by drafting clauses that propose concrete solutions. This stage tests delegates' policy clarity, legal precision, and ability to convert ideas into actionable international commitments.

6. Resolution Presentation

Approved draft resolutions are formally introduced to the committee. Sponsors explain the intent, structure, and key operative clauses, allowing the committee to understand the proposed framework before debate continues.

7. Cross-Bloc Scrutiny Session

Draft resolutions are examined critically by other blocs and delegations. Delegates question feasibility, legality, and political implications, ensuring rigorous review and strengthening the quality of proposed solutions.

8. Amending Resolutions

Delegates propose amendments to refine, clarify, or modify draft resolutions. Both friendly and unfriendly amendments are considered in accordance with procedural rules, reflecting negotiation, compromise, and adaptability.

9. Final Bloc Presentation

Blocs present their finalized resolutions, highlighting revisions, consensus achieved, and anticipated impact. This stage emphasizes persuasion, clarity, and diplomatic confidence prior to voting.

10. Voting Session

The committee enters voting procedure to determine the adoption of draft resolutions. Each Member State casts one vote, and decisions are finalized in accordance with UNGA voting rules, marking the culmination of the committee's work.

This structured debate flow reflects the discipline, precision, and deliberative rigor of the United Nations system. By guiding delegates through each stage of policy articulation, negotiation, and decision-making, it ensures a realistic diplomatic experience that cultivates strategic thinking, consensus-building, and leadership. Ultimately, the process equips delegates with the competence, confidence, and professional acumen required for meaningful engagement in real-world multilateral diplomacy.

5 DELEGATE PREPARATION GUIDE

Preparing for Model United Nations is more than completing assignments; it's about thinking like a diplomat, engaging with global challenges, and communicating with precision, integrity, and influence. The more thoroughly you prepare, the more powerfully you will contribute to debate — and the greater the impact you will make in your future global career.

1. Research Methodology

Effective preparation begins with strategic, disciplined research. A delegate's credibility and influence in committee depend on deep subject-matter knowledge, contextual insight, and the ability to integrate data with diplomatic reasoning.

Start with the basics:

- Understand the topic's context and history — review UN reports, resolutions, treaties, and relevant international agreements.
- Study your assigned country's foreign policy, historical positions, and voting patterns related to the issue.
- Use reputable sources such as official UN documents, academic journals, government statements, and global think-tanks.

- Organize research thematically: Background, Past International Actions, National Policy, and Potential Solutions.

Research tips:

- Prepare a Research Binder or digital folder with key documents, charts, and summaries to reference during committee sessions.
- Distinguish fact from opinion, and annotate sources to defend your positions with authority.
- Anticipate other country viewpoints — identifying allies and opposition strengthens negotiation strategy.

2. Position Paper Guidelines

A Position Paper distils your research into a succinct statement of your country's stance. At the United Nations, position documents shape debate and demonstrate your delegate competence.

Core Purpose:

- Articulate your country's understanding of the issue.
- Display how the issue affects your nation.
- Present clear, actionable policy goals and proposed paths forward.

Structure:

1. Introduction: A concise thesis stating your country's overall position.
2. Background & Past International Actions: Historical context and relevant

UN actions or treaties.

- Country Policy & Perspective: Your nation's policy rationale, supported by evidence and official sources.
- Proposed Solutions: Realistic, committee-oriented resolutions your country supports.

Key principles:

- Be clear, concise, and evidence-based — avoid verbosity.
- Cite authoritative sources (e.g., UN charters, national statements, treaties).
- Submit on time and conform to formatting and length requirements set by the conference. (Max. word limit is 600 words; Font - Times New Roman)

3. Draft Resolution Writing

Draft resolutions are the culmination of negotiation, collaboration, and diplomatic articulation. They translate debate into actionable policy recommendations that the committee may adopt.

Resolution Anatomy:

- Heading: Includes committee name, sponsors, and signatories.
- Preambulatory Clauses: Provide context, citing past UN decisions, and explain why the issue matters.
- Operative Clauses: Recommend specific actions or measures that the committee should take.

Best practices:

- Collaborate early — forming blocs and co-sponsorship increases chances of passage.
- Ensure preambular clauses logically justify proposed solutions.
- Operative clauses must be clear, specific, and feasible — answering "who," "what," and "how."
- Use formal diplomatic phrasing and maintain consistency in layout and punctuation.

4. Speech & Debate Techniques

Confident delivery and persuasive argumentation are essential to influence committee outcomes and build consensus. United Nations

Before You Speak:

- Plan interventions that are relevant, succinct, and strategically timed.
- Reference your position paper to ensure consistency and credibility.

During Debate:

- Address the Chair respectfully and adhere strictly to speaking protocols.
- Frame speeches to clarify your country's priorities, outline solutions, and respond constructively to others' points.
- Use facts and figures judiciously — support assertions with verifiable evidence.

- Engage others during unmoderated caucuses to refine resolution text and build alliances.
- Be articulate but open to compromise — consensus is the core strength of multilateral diplomacy.

Committee: United Nations General Assembly (UNGA)

Agenda: Reforming the United Nations Security Council – Expansion or Efficiency?

Country: XYZ

SDG Focus: SDG 16 – Peace, Justice, and Strong Institutions

Introduction

The United Nations Security Council (UNSC) stands at the core of the international peace and security architecture. While its authority remains unparalleled, its structural design—largely unchanged since 1945—has increasingly been called into question. Country XYZ asserts that the credibility and effectiveness of the UNSC are contingent upon its ability to reflect present-day geopolitical realities while maintaining decisional efficiency. In alignment with Sustainable Development Goal 16, XYZ advocates for reform that strengthens institutional legitimacy, accountability, and responsiveness without undermining the Council's operational capacity.

Structural Imbalance and the Case for Reform

Country XYZ notes that the UNSC's current composition fails to adequately represent the demographic, political, and economic shifts that have occurred over the past eight decades. Entire regions remain structurally underrepresented, despite bearing the disproportionate consequences of UNSC decisions. This disconnect weakens confidence in multilateral decision-making and challenges the principle of sovereign equality enshrined in the UN Charter.

XYZ recognizes that reform is both politically sensitive and procedurally complex. Nevertheless, the absence of reform risks rendering the Council increasingly ineffective and detached from the realities it seeks to govern.

Expansion as a Means to Enhance Legitimacy

Country XYZ supports a calibrated expansion of the UNSC, encompassing both permanent and non-permanent categories, with particular emphasis on equitable regional representation. Such expansion should be guided by objective criteria, including contribution to international peacekeeping, commitment to multilateralism, and adherence to international law.

XYZ cautions, however, that expansion must not be pursued solely as a symbolic gesture. Without complementary procedural reforms, an enlarged Council risks exacerbating inefficiencies and diluting responsibility. Therefore, expansion must be accompanied by institutional safeguards to preserve decisional coherence.

Efficiency, Veto Power, and Institutional Accountability

Efficiency remains a central concern for Country XYZ. The inability of the UNSC to act decisively in the face of humanitarian crises has often stemmed not from a lack of authority, but from political deadlock—particularly related to the use of the veto.

While acknowledging the political realities surrounding veto reform, XYZ strongly supports voluntary veto restraint in situations involving mass atrocities, war crimes, and crimes against humanity. Such restraint would represent a meaningful step toward aligning the Council's actions with international humanitarian norms and the preventive ethos of SDG 16.

Furthermore, XYZ advocates for enhanced transparency in UNSC deliberations, including improved communication with the General Assembly and affected Member States. Strengthening this relationship would ensure broader accountability while maintaining the UNSC's primary mandate.

UNSC Reform and SDG 16

SDG 16 calls for the development of effective, accountable, and inclusive institutions at all levels. UNSC reform is inseparable from this objective. A Council that is both representative and efficient is better equipped to prevent conflict, uphold justice, and reinforce the rule of law. Country XYZ emphasizes that preventive diplomacy and institutional legitimacy are cost-effective and sustainable alternatives to reactive crisis management.

Conclusion

Country XYZ maintains that the dichotomy between expansion and efficiency presents a false choice. Sustainable reform must integrate both dimensions through pragmatic compromise and political will. By modernizing its structure while strengthening its procedures, the UNSC can reaffirm its central role in global governance. XYZ urges Member States to approach reform negotiations not through narrow national interests, but through a shared commitment to peace, justice, and strong institutions for future generations.

SAMPLE OPENING SPEECH

Honourable Chair, distinguished delegates,

The delegation of XYZ believes that the debate on Security Council reform is no longer theoretical—it is institutional and urgent. An organ designed for the geopolitical realities of 1945 cannot credibly govern the security challenges of the 21st century.

XYZ asserts that legitimacy and efficiency are not competing priorities, but mutually reinforcing imperatives. A Council that lacks representative balance will continue to face questions of credibility, while a Council paralysed by political deadlock will fail its primary mandate of maintaining international peace and security.

In alignment with SDG 16, XYZ advocates a calibrated expansion of the Council, paired with procedural reforms that enhance transparency, accountability, and responsible decision-making—particularly regarding the use of the veto in situations of mass atrocities.

The question before this Assembly is not whether reform is necessary, but whether we possess the political will to modernize multilateralism without weakening it. XYZ stands ready to engage constructively toward a Security Council that is representative in composition, efficient in action, and legitimate in authority.

Thank you.

NOTE- Each delegate will get max. 45-50 sec. of time for the speech during GSL.

- Negotiation & Consensus-Building: Through caucusing and resolution drafting, delegates master the art of compromise while safeguarding national interests—a core diplomatic skill.
- Leadership & Strategic Thinking: Chairing blocs, sponsoring resolutions, and guiding discussions strengthen leadership, decision-making, and strategic foresight.
- Professional Writing: Drafting position papers and resolutions enhances structured, formal writing aligned with international policy standards.

These competencies mirror those required in diplomacy, international law, development policy, and global governance.

2. Career Pathways in the United Nations

Model United Nations offers early exposure to the structure, working culture, and values of the United Nations system.

- Delegates gain familiarity with UN organs, mandates, procedures, and multilateral negotiations, creating a strong foundation for future engagement.
- MUN experience strengthens applications for UN internships, Young Professionals Programmes (YPP), Junior Professional Officer (JPO) roles, and consultancy positions.
- Skills acquired are directly applicable to careers within UN agencies, peacekeeping missions, humanitarian organizations, development programmes, and international courts.
- Many diplomats, UN officials, and international civil servants globally credit Model United Nations as their first introduction to international public service.

MUN prepares the delegates to compete credibly for real United Nations.

3. Leveraging MUN Experience for Global Careers

The value of MUN extends far beyond the United Nations ecosystem.

- MUN experience enhances profiles for foreign services, international NGOs, think tanks, global policy institutes, law schools, and multinational corporations.
- Delegates learn to frame their MUN participation effectively on CVs, LinkedIn profiles, personal statements, and scholarship applications.
- Conference awards, leadership roles, and committee performance serve as verifiable indicators of competence, initiative, and global awareness.
- The ability to work in multicultural environments and address global challenges positions MUN participants as globally competent professionals.

When articulated well, MUN becomes a career differentiator, not merely an extracurricular activity.

4. Networking & Professional Conduct

Model United Nations is a powerful platform for building meaningful professional relationships.

- Delegates interact with peers from diverse cultural, academic, and national backgrounds, fostering cross-border understanding and collaboration.
- Engagement with Executive Board members, advisors, and speakers provides access to mentorship, guidance, and professional insight.
- Many long-term collaborations, academic partnerships, and career opportunities originate from MUN networks and alumni communities.
- Delegates are trained in professional etiquette, including formal address, diplomatic courtesy, respectful disagreement, and ethical conduct.

Professionalism, integrity, and respect are not optional at MUN—they are expected, observed, and remembered.

Model United Nations is where potential meets preparation. It refines intellect, builds confidence, and opens doors to global opportunities. At Unique Bureaucrats MUN Jaipur 2026, delegates do not merely simulate diplomacy—they begin their journey as future leaders in international affairs.
